

The Message & The Messenger Paradox

The Fourth Doorway To Becoming A Financial Shaman

The Paradox:

I don't have a message because I'm not a messenger, I'm an educator or a teacher. However, you may hear the same lesson over and over again and believe it is a message. When a financial shaman says "There is always enough money," that truth takes on a life of its own. The message will do things that the messenger does not intend. Essentially, the message is good news for all those who are suffering under the weight of financial stress due to scarcity. However, if you use that wisdom in your life it could have disastrous results because it didn't come from within you. Using this truth before you understand it internally is like attempting to lift a bodybuilder's amount of weight. That said, it is still the truth, even if it is simply my truth.

Isn't anyone allowed to believe whatever they want to believe? Isn't everyone allowed to test whatever theories they want? If the message hurts people, even if that is not the messenger's intention, isn't that what is supposed to happen? Wouldn't that pain the messenger did not intend also happen FOR their evolution and growth by exposing outdated beliefs? No person is responsible for anyone else's feelings or emotions, however, a shaman can hold space to help people process emotions if they shift negatively and ask for help, of course. So how responsible is the shaman for the message if those who are hurt don't ask for help?

The Threshold:

I will tell you over and over again that I don't have a message because I'm not a messenger. But mainly because I am here to elevate your heart's wisdom and make your heart the place you go to help make decisions. But since you are not practiced at that yet it is easy to lean on the wisdom coming through my heart as a foundation until you get the hang of listening to the messages coming from within yourself. However, do not get lost in believing we have the same truths, the same perceptions, or the same calling to fulfill in the same way. I am here to teach, that is all.

If you believe you came to Earth to spread a message and some or all of it can be found in my teachings then I invite you to steal it all, cannibalize it, make it your own, and go spread your message without mentioning my name whatsoever. I don't need notoriety and I see no benefit to fame. I'm here to help you learn to follow your heart to find your calling and master it. Some of the heart's truths are universal while some are unique to you and your experience. I only speak from my heart and I invite you to only speak from your heart. If we say the same things that is okay and if it is totally opposite, that is perfectly alright as well.

The paradox is, am I responsible for what you or anyone else does with my teachings? Are you responsible for how anyone uses your wisdom? I believe I'm only responsible for what I teach and what comes through my heart, not what others do with it. If you disagree, that is okay with me. How would you do it better?
