

The More Paradox

The Fifth Doorway To Becoming A Financial Shaman

The Paradox:

When you want more of something how do you know that want is not coming from scarcity? Any time you perceive you do not have enough of something you will want more. Plus, you will always need more air, food, water, etc. tomorrow. Tomorrow's needs create insecurity and become wants you need to fulfill today. How do you move toward more without questioning where the want for more is coming from?

If you don't want more will more come to you? Is accepting what you have as enough evolving your understanding of yourself and the universe you live in? If scarcity is what drives you to want more then you are listening to your fear and your ego. When you are listening to the energy of scarcity you will surely make decisions that keep it alive in your life. Therefore, how do you create more in your life while simultaneously believing what you have is enough? How do you want more without scarcity being involved in the wanting?

The Threshold:

When you set out to create more of whatever you want in your life, let's say money for ease of example, you must do so believing there is no need to want more. You cannot be attached to more money coming into your life and make solid financial decisions. Attachment to a result will certainly cause a scarcity-based destructive decision. How do you show the Universe you are ready for more money while being grateful for all you have been given AND not needing more money to come to you for you to be happy? How do you evolve your ability to receive more money without being attached to it ever coming to you? How do you know you have evolved your ability to receive more money and steward it well without more money coming to you to let you know you are evolving in the right direction?

You can say, “Well, just follow your heart toward mastering your heart’s calling and that will evolve your ability to receive more money. Take your mind off of more money and keep it on evolving your skills and talents toward mastery and everything will work itself out.” That is a great suggestion and you will go far in your evolution by adhering to that advice. However, do you miss out on evolving your understanding around money, or whatever you want, when you take your mind off of wanting more of it to simply focus on your evolution alone? Are you limiting your evolution by not focusing on what you want more of, or at the very least understanding finances on a deeper level, in this example?

The Solution: